

WHERE YOUR MARKETING LEAKS

A 20-minute self-audit for founder-led businesses.

HANNAH
verdant

Most growing businesses don't have a marketing problem. They have a clarity problem.

Marketing usually grows up alongside a business rather than being designed on purpose. The pieces exist, they're just not joined up.

This audit takes about 20 minutes. Seven areas, three questions each. Score every question 0 to 2, honestly. Nobody sees this but you.

HOW TO SCORE

0

rarely / no

1

sometimes / partially

2

yes / consistently

01 Message

If the words change every time, nothing built on them can hold.

If you asked three people on your team what you do and who it's for, would you get three different answers?

Do you have one sentence you'd say confidently to a stranger, or does it change depending on who's asking?

Does your website say the same thing your team says out loud?

SECTION TOTAL

02 Website

Five seconds is roughly how long a stranger gives you.

Could a stranger tell what you do within five seconds of landing on your homepage?

Is there one obvious next step, or several competing calls to action?

Has anyone outside the business reviewed it in the last 12 months?

SECTION TOTAL _____ / 6

03 Email

The quietest channel is usually the one already paid for.

Do you have a list of past enquiries and customers in one place?

Has that list heard from you in the last 90 days?

If someone replied to your last email, would you know?

04 Content

Consistency is a structure question, not a discipline question.

Could you predict what you'll post next week without thinking hard right now?

☐ 0☐ 1☐ 2

Is there a repeatable format you reuse, or does every post start from a blank page?

☐ 0☐ 1☐ 2

Has content gone quiet for more than a month in the last year?

☐ 0☐ 1☐ 2

SECTION TOTAL _____ / 6

05 Pipeline visibility

You can't protect a source you can't name.

Could you list where your last ten clients actually came from?

Do you track this anywhere, or is it a guess based on memory?

If your best referral source dried up tomorrow, would you notice within a month?

SECTION TOTAL _____ / 6

06 Systems and handoffs

Enquiries rarely announce themselves twice.

When an enquiry comes in, is there a defined next step, or does it depend on who sees it first?

Could someone else in the business handle a new enquiry the same way you would?

Do enquiries ever get missed or answered late because nobody owned the follow-up?

SECTION TOTAL _____ / 6

07 AI

AI multiplies structure. It can't replace it.

Is AI doing repeatable work in your marketing today,
or did a few experiments never quite stick?

Does anything AI writes get a human pass before a customer sees it?

Could you name the tasks AI saves you time on each week?

SECTION TOTAL _____ / 6

Your score

Before you add anything up, circle your lowest-scoring section. That's usually the one quietly dragging on all the others, and the one worth talking about first.

Now add up your seven section totals: _____ / 42

0–14

This is a completely normal place to be. Marketing usually grows up alongside a business rather than being designed on purpose. The fix isn't more activity, it's deciding what to keep, what to drop, and what order to rebuild it in.

15–28

You've got real foundations. The gaps are specific rather than everywhere, which is the easier problem to have. Usually one or two of the seven areas above are quietly dragging on all the others.

29–42

You're closer than most businesses your size. What's likely missing isn't structure, it's refinement.

If you'd like a second pair of eyes on your score, that's exactly what a discovery call is for.

45 minutes, mostly me asking questions, no pressure either way.
